WHAT THE PROJECT IS ABOUT

The project is exploring what “ageing well” means. The aim is to find out how best to support the changing hopes, choices and needs of people ageing with a disability.

WHERE THE PROJECT IS UP TO

The report on the Research and Design stage of the project is available on the Amicus website http://amicus.org.au/ageing-well-project/

A huge thankyou to all the people with disability and their family members who spoke with me as part of the research. The experiences and insights shared have been invaluable.

Thanks also for the ideas and views provided by staff in various roles from Amicus, The Christie Centre and other organisations, as well as by researchers and consultants in the disability field. Thanks in particular to Chris Fyffe, Barb Dalloway and Diane Craig for ideas, advice and close reading of the draft report. All extremely valuable.

NEXT STEPS

The pilot stage is now starting, based first at Amicus and, a little further down the track, at the Christie Centre in Mildura. It has been funded to take place over a twelve month period.

The first step is to get together a Steering Group of older people and to make or re-establish connections with people with a disability who might like to be involved in the pilot program.
